BRYSON SENTENCED TO 30 DAYS; APPEALS

Frank T. Bryson, about twenty-one years old, of Watertown street, Nonantum, was sentenced to thirty days in the house of correction by Judge Copeland in the Newton Police Court to-day, on the charge of assault and battery with a revolver on a young man on the Fourth. It was claimed that Bryson fired the revolver four times, loaded with blank cartridges, and that the wadding struck the complainant. He appealed and was held in bonds of $800.

SAVE INVALID FROM FLAMES DURING PANIC

Unknown Man Braves Tenement Fire to Aid Helpless Sufferer in North End.

One man suffering from rheumatism was rescued, a piano and other household property was burned and the tenement dwellers in the neighborhood of No. 22 Unity street, North End, were given a bad scare shortly before noon to-day when fire broke out in the dwelling house at that number.

James Campbell, fifty years old and single, who is an invalid from rheumatics, was in a room on the second floor of the two and one-half story wooden building when the fire broke out on the lower floor. Some unknown man knowing the patient was upstairs ran to the rescue and carried Campbell to the street.

Campbell was the only person in the house at the time. Mrs. Nellie Sullivan, who conducts a lodging house in the dwelling, left home at 10 o'clock, and she had not returned when the place caught fire. The other lodgers were at work.

The exact cause of the fire is unknown, but in the opinion of those in the vicinity it was caused by some small boys who had been setting off firecrackers on the street throwing one of them into the front of the house. Mrs. Sullivan's loss included a piano valued at $500, that was badly damaged. Fireman George F. Moore had one of the fingers of his right hand badly jammed. Damage to the building and contents was placed at $600.

PARKER LEADS FIGHT ON RADICAL PLATFORM PLANKS

New York Delegation Names Former Judge as Representative on Resolutions With Instructions.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

DENVER, July 6.—The New York delegation to the Democratic National Convention, which opens to-morrow, met at noon. Alton B. Parker was named a member of the Committee on Resolutions, Daniel F. Cohalan of the Committee on Credentials, Deputy Attorney-General Charles Williams of the Committee on Permanent Organization, and J. H. Brady of the Committee on Rules.

No action was taken on the vice-presidential nomination.

A committee of nine was appointed to draw up New York's desires in the matter of the platform. Judge Parker was instructed to oppose a radical anti-injunction plank; physical valuation of railroads; guaranty of bank deposits and licensing of corporations by the Federal government, and the proposed amendment to the Sherman law exempting farmers and workingmen fro mits operations.

The decision of the delegation from New York with its seventy-eight votes will be a large measure settle the question of Bryan's nomination on the first ballot.

While it has been pretty generally agreed that Bryan would "get there" with ease on the first roll call his friends would feel a great deal easier if they were certain that Murphy and his Tammany and up-the-State braves were safely in the corral.

The New York delegation is prone to consider that it holds the balance of power and demands attention accordingly.

It is the consensus of opinion here that the seventy-eight votes will be cast for the Lincoln statesman and orator in return for the vice-presidential nomination.

Littleton for Second Place.

M. W. Littleton, the former president of the borough of Brooklyn, who came into especial prominence in defending Harry Thaw and saving him from the electric chair, is mentioned for Bryan's running mate. He would be acceptable to Bryan.

The contests officially entertained by the National Committee are those from the following States:

New York—Second to Sixth districts inclusive.

Pennsylvania—First to Sixth districts, inclusive.

District of Columbia—Entire delegation.

Illinois—First to Tenth districts, inclusive.

Idaho—Entire delegation.

Ohio—Ninth to Nineteenth districts, inclusive.

The general expectation now is for a four-days' convention with final adjournment some time on Friday; but potentialities of trouble as yet undeveloped lie in several subjects still unsettled, and a positive forecast is impossible.

Labor Plank in Doubt.

General interest in the platform is still confined almost wholly to its proposed plank regarding the use of court injunctions, especially in labor controversies.

The labor representatives on the ground, Gompers, Mitchell and others, are diligently pressing their claims upon those who will presumably have important influence in the committee on resolutions.

One of the big contingents which arrived late yesterday was from St. Joseph. The party came by special train and with a band marched to its hotel and established permanent headquarters. Conspicuous among the Missouri arrivals was "Old Kaintuck," a famous Missouri character who is a living representation of Uncle Sam. He was dressed in typical costume of stars and stripes and attracted much attention about the hotel corridors and on the street.

The Florida delegation of ten members claims the distinction of possessing among its members three of the youngest men who will sit in the convention. They are F. V. Will sit in the convention, who is only twenty-two years old; J. T. D. Crawford of the third district, who is twenty-three, and Max M. Brown, a delegate at large, who is twenty-five.

BRYAN MAROONED BY FLOOD; TRAINS HALTED

DELEGATES SIDETRACKED; FIVE DROWNINGS REPORTED; DAMAGE HEAVY.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

LINCOLN, Neb., July 6.—Bryan had his say yesterday concerning Jim Guffey, and the broadside hurled by the Pennsylvania in Denver last night failed to disturb the serenity of the Democratic leader. He positively declined to say anything in response to Guffey's attack.

Fairview is cut off from Lincoln to-day by the severest flood in Lincoln's history. Brewer car bridge were washed out in Antelope Valley, and the only communication with Bryan's home is by telephone. The flood situation, besides homing Bryan, threatens to delay the arrival of several thousand delegates to Denver.

Ohio and Alabama delegates, accompanied by several hundred boosters, are detracked on the Rock Island road at Havelock, 5 miles east, unable to get through to Lincoln. Rock Island traffic is completely suspended, and the same condition prevail on the Burlington road. The passenger station of the latter road stands a foot deep in water.

The Salt Creek flood is spreading out two miles wide. Burlington trains have been annulled in all directions, and two special trains to convey several hundred Lincoln Democrats due to leave this morning for the convention were abandoned, unable to get through.

Five drownings have been reported in the west bottoms and dozens of families are perched on house tops. Rescuers are using boats. The gas and electric light plants are under water and the evening newspapers were forced to suspend business on account of lack of gas pressure for the typesetting machines. The rain gauge showed six inches of water fell in last night's storm.

STRANG 35 TO 1 FOR BIG RACE

DIEPPE, France, July 6.—Guyot, in a Delage car, won to-day's auto race for light machines. The race was one of the preliminaries to the big race for the Grand Prix to-morrow.

The American car, Strang driver, is not conceded a possible chance in the big event. Odds are 35 to 1 against him.

A powerful story from the powerful play of primitive life in the Canadian wilds. It begins in next SUNDAY'S AMERICAN.

Macdonald of Arlington, in the East Cambridge courts, to recover $20,000 for the alleged alienation of Mrs. Elkins' affections. The action, which promises to be sensational, is to come to trial is brought through Attorney William H. Wade, at No. 92 State street, Boston.

In he papers, which were filed to-day, Elkins declares that his married life and the course of true love between himself and Mrs. Elkins ran serenely until Macdonald appeared.

NATIONAL LEAGUE BASEBALL GROUNDS, ST. LOUIS, Mo., July 6.—One of the hottest days of the season attended the opening of the Boston Carolina, series at League Park today. The heat was intensified by low hanging clouds, which threatened momentarily to cause an interruption to the proceedings.

Both teams cut out the usual fungo practice and contented themselves with the lightest kind of work before the game.

McCloskey warmed up Raymond and Lush to work against the Dovesytes. Kelley had Ferguson and Flaherty ready for Boston's heavy work.

The Cardinals are going along at a rapid gait at present and Kelley realizes he will have his hands full to get the edge of the four-game series. However, the Boston leader is optimistic, and says he will be at the top of the second division by tea time Thursday.

BASEBALL GROUNDS, Worcester, July 6.—The Boston American League team played here for the first time this afternoon, Jesse Burkett's New England League champions being the opponents of the Red Sox. It was a hot day, but a good sized crowd turned out to see the team everybody is talking about.

Lord, who is a member of the Red Sox bunch formerly played in Worcester and his friends turned out in force to see him. They did not expect him to cover third base, however, as they knew he is suffering from an injury.

Manager McGuire only brought enough men with him to play the game. There was an extra pitcher, however, to be used in case of necessity.

Manager Burkett was confident of trimming the American Leaguers as he figured that McGuire would put in a "kid" pitcher and he counted on his team pounding the youngster's curves. "We'll show those big leaguers a thing or two," declared the old player.

McGuire simply laughed at Burkett.

AUTOS SAVED DIXEY ESTATE

LENOX, July 6.—Ten millionaires who have Summer residences in this town turned their large touring cars over to the Lenox Fire Department to-day, and thereby saved "Tanglewood," the handsome Summer home of Richard C. Dixey of Beacon street, Boston, from being totally destroyed by fire.

Shortly before noon the fire was discovered, and the fire department was notified. As the estate is situated on the crest of a steep hill, the firemen secured the automobiles and gained much time. The blaze was confined to the model barn on the estate and the damage will amount to $8,000. All the horses and live stock in the barns were saved by volunteers.

"ASHBURTON" IS ACQUITTED

"Lord Ashburton," otherwise known as George F. Richards, C. Francis Richards, William Griffin, Colonel Hay, Charles Bertram, G. Saville and half a dozen other names, ran the gauntlet of trial in two courts to-day and was acquitted in both.

He was first tried in the Boston Municipal Court on the charge of being a fugitive from justice and discharged by Judge Bennett. He was immediately turned over to the East Boston Court, where he was tried for larceny of $70 from George W. Barlow of Winthrop. Here, too, he was acquitted.

ANTI-BRYAN MEN HIGHER IN THE AIR THAN DENVER

Says Samuel G. Blythe; and Denver Boasts That It Is at Least a Mile Up

Opposition to "The Peerless" Is Spraddled in the Empyrean, with Ballast Gone and No Parachute—Only a Miracle or Two Miracles Can Beat Bryan.

By SAMUEL G. BLYTHE.

DENVER, July 6.—One of the proud boasts of Denver is that it is a mile high in the air, but when we consider the position of the anti-Bryan men at this convention, Denver seems to be a deep depression below the sea level, for the anti-Bryan men are seven miles up in the air and getting nearer the milky way every minute.

More than this, they are all spraddled out in the blue empyrean, with their ballast gone, their drag ropes fouled and not a parachute at hand with which to make a peaceful drop.

When they first conglobulated, just beneath the forelegs of Ursus Major, they came to the decision that there are but two ways to defeat Bryan, to wit: (a) By a miracle, and (b) By two miracles.

Inasmuch as there is not even an apprentice miracle worker in the anti-Bryan forces, it is reasonably certain to-day that the inevitable will be projected on the screen along about Thursday of this week, when a large number of madly enthusiastic delegates will take chances on their heart's rub-a-dubbing too fast in the high altitudes and will give the "Peerless" leader another chance to prove whether his label describes the goods, or should again be changed to that melancholy designation, the cheerless leader, mingled the while with the hoarse huzzas and a few raucous observations, such as: "We hope he chokes!"

They're There to Name a Man They Don't Want.

You see, this is another instance where the politicians—that is, the delegates—are here to vote with the understanding for a man they do not want. Get on a confidential basis with almost any set of delegates and you will find they intend to vote for Bryan because they think the people want him, not because they want him themselves.

If some genius would come along with a scheme that would let a lot of these delegates in on a method whereby they could vote against Bryan and escape being burned in effigy when they got back home, these delegates would march lobbily to the front and cast their first and unfranked ballots for other persons. No such genius has appeared.

Whereupon Mr. Bryan bids fair to be nominated, sustained by men who are staring listlessly around the Brown Palace Hotel and discussing such topics as "I was this here Brown who built this hotel?" and "Kin you take as many drinks out here as you kin at home?"

The Amalgamated Prosperity Association of Vice Presidential candidates received many accessions to-day. It is now proposed to run the Auditorium in a day and meeting to-night, for there is no room in any of the local hotels large enough to hold the full membership of the organization.

Fresh enthusiasm was aroused when Charles Bryan, brother of "the Peerless," appeared and announced that no opposition will be taken on the Vice-Presidency and the platform is to be agreed upon. Of course the platform has been agreed upon at Lincoln, but Mr. Bryan means until the platform as agreed upon at Lincoln had been presented to the convention, with a brief reading by any of the gags reading, "Please adopt at once. W. J. B." and duly agreed upon there.

"I. Ham" on Why They Seek Second Place.

This gives the Amalgamated Association full swing for three more days and all the members working earnestly. Colonel J. Hamilton Lewis, of Washington, is the prominent member of the association and also a good general, and is looked to for anything else that may be open, either in Denver or in Illinois. He knows all the motives of some of his colleagues in the race to-day by saying:

"Many a man gets himself mentioned for Vice-President here so he can go home and get a better job in the Legislature.

This was not clubby of Colonel Jim Ham, inasmuch as he may want to go to the Legislature himself if nothing better offers. Moreover, it was discovered to-day that the colonel, who is making his campaign on his original and copyrighted platform of having his spats made like his orange pinkers in shade, is selling under false colors, so to speak. Word was passed around that the colonel has reformed, not to say reincarnated, his famous Prussian hair with a toupee. When asked to designate this as a campaign slander the colonel blushed and hastily changed the subject by calling attention, to his whiskers, which, he said, retain all their former glory, although somewhat shot at the ends.

"Bill Says to Do This," Says "Brother Charley."

Mr. Charles Bryan was an object of much curiosity. Mr. Bryan is a fine example of a living relative, albeit he suffers from a congestion of language as marked as is the eruption of speech noted in his illustrious brother. Indeed, Mr. Bryan's Mr. Charles Bryan's vocabulary seems to be composed of the phrase "Bill says to do this," which he repeats to the men who think they are running the convention, with monotonous regularity. At that, other words would seem to be superfluous for what Charles says Bill says to do is generally done forthwith.

Denver began to realize this morning where she is going to get back that hundred thousand dollars she put up for the convention, for the delegates arrived rapidly and the nice-counting crowd, which up to Saturday had consisted of reporters and a few harmless strangers, took on tone. Reception committees, arrayed in dusters and light felt hats, trudged back and forth from the Union Station, and each delegation that would march was given a band to lead it to the stirring scenes up town. Oklahoma arrived early and surged into the Brown Palace Hotel, and numerous several members of the delegation leaped on the settees and made calisthenic motions, noisily deprecating the fact that the hotel rates are more than $2 a day.

Begins to Look Like A Real Convention.

Then, like blind Senator from Oklahoma, guided by his wife, marched with the Oklahomans and drew the first real cheer that has been heard here since the Greek god "Kin you take as many drinks out here as you kin at home?"

Then, like blind Senator from Oklahoma, guided by his wife, marched with the Oklahomans and drew the first real cheer that has been heard here since the Greek god left Denver.

Pennsylvania came in and various other States, and the gathering became a sort of a growing and a real convention crowd just before the convention is to meet. The streets are now being lighted at night with lights and all the people are organized into a welcoming party, and the hotels make a record and will, for if anybody is unaccommodated, it will not be Denver's fault.

Judge Alton B. Parker of New York, was among those present in the Pennsylvania from time to time. Judge Parker was received with acclamation. As the delegate rushed up to him and struck out his hand:

"Hello, John!" he said; "I'm glad to see you. When did you get up from St. Louis?"

"I think you are mistaken," the judge replied.

"Well, b' jinks, I guess I am!" exclaimed the delegate. "Excuse me. You look just like a man from St. Louis I've been here days and I'm backed away."

Meantime the anti-Bryan men kept getting higher and higher in the air. They held conferences and conventions and caucuses, and this morning were still facing Denver. The Illinois delegation to the convention is owned by Bryan, sewed up in such a way that it cannot get away for all time comes they will do what Bryan tells them to do.

There was desultory talk about the platform and Colonel James M. Guffey of Pennsylvania sedately left the reservation and came back to the imperial city step by the fact that Bryan kicked him out before he decided to go. Charles F. Murphy of New York, who refused to sit in the band wagon on Friday night, ignored the regular caucuses and the usual amount of pitch was peddled by the little peddlers.

Why Bryan is Using the Iron Heel.

Through it all was the undertone: "Why is Bryan grinding us into submission in this way? Why is he so arbitrary?" and that remained the mystery of the day. The man who asked the hotel keeper at The Wyeth, Wyo., why the Pacific road removed the railroad station from the center of the village to a point a mile away, much to the discomfort of the Big Sliding people.

"Sorry to me," said the hotel keeper, "that the Union Pacific moved that station because they couldn't."

Which appears to be the answer. Bryan is doing what he wants to do, and he can do what he wants to do and there is no one who appears to be power enough of any kind to stop him.

That is what I have tried to do in Cleveland.

"Do you think Mr. Bryan can carry Ohio?" he was asked.

"I don't know," declared Mr. Johnson. "The Republicans there are not in good shape."

"Have you heard anything significant of the situation in New York States"

"I have not."

"Anything in regard to Illinois."

"Yes," Mayor Johnson replied, "Mr. Bryan has a fighting chance to carry all that tier of States.

"You mean that, Indiana and Illinois?"

"Yes," said Mayor Johnson. "Now that's more talking than I've done for a long time."

Delegation Filled Out With Railroad Men.

The Massachusetts delegates meet to-day at the Hotel Savoy to elect a National Committeeman to succeed Colonel William A. Gaston, the only candidate in the field is Dr. John Coughlin, former Mayor of Fall River. He is a Williams man, but the other faction lacks the votes to beat him. The call for the meeting was issued on the train by Colonel John Sweeney of Lawrence, the delegation chairman, just as the delegates caught their first glimpse of Pike's Peak.

Massachusetts is entitled to thirty two votes in the convention, and has elected thirty delegates and alternates in the party. The delegation will be filled out by making its due form alternates out of James M. Shea of the Grand Trunk and John F. Cahill of the Rock Island Road. These men came with the party from Boston as traveling agents. Their selection is a tribute to their service.

COL. GUFFEY'S ATTACK ON BRYAN

"In 1896 and 1900 the late Senator Jones many times declared there were just three men upon whom he never called for financial assistance in vain. One was the late Marcus Daly, another was William Randolph Hearst, the third was myself. * * *

"And what followed? After Bryan's defeat Mr. Hearst became his patron and paid him thousands of dollars, only to be turned upon without a qualm—though now, when again a candidate, Mr. Bryan fawns upon him in hope of gaining his support.

"I reap my reward in a vicious, brutal attack from the man who professed to be my friend. Mr. Daly died soon enough not to feel the ingratitude of one who accepts a man's assistance and at the first refusal to serve a selfish purpose spits in his face. * * *

"This simple recital of plain facts should be sufficient to enable any fair mind to determine with certainty, at a time when harmony is the chief requisite of party success, who is the self-convicted falsifier, who the hypocrite, who the real and most arrogant "boss" ever known in the Democratic party, and who, I regret to add, the ingrate."—Statement issued by Colonel James M. Guffey of Pennsylvania in reply to Mr. Bryan's Lincoln speech.

BRYAN AN INGRATE, GUFFEY'S CHARGE

DENVER, July 6.—The publication to-day of the attack on William Jennings Bryan made by Colonel James M. Guffey, the national committeeman from Pennsylvania, has created a sensation among the delegates now assembled for the Democratic convention. It is the worst verbal pummeling that ever a candidate for the first office of the land received at the hands of a leader in his own party.

Colonel Guffey's statement was given out amid exciting circumstances. Guffey broke about his quarters in the Adams Hotel with tightened face and fire in which as his snowy moustache.

The statement is a reply to Bryan's speech, and no more. It recalls the attack which Bryan made on Roger Sullivan's comments on the neatness as illustrating that Bryan is not opposed to bosses if a sweeping assertion, only opposed to such as receive bad notices. Guffey says that when they oppose him they fail to give him desired assistance.

The statement is printed in full in this edition of the AMERICAN. This is the first publication in full of the caustic statement, the only garbled and incomplete statements having been printed in other newspapers.

Guffey's Statement.

Colonel Guffey's statement in full follows:

In the course of his Fourth of July speech to twelve or fourteen out of the sixty-eight delegates from Pennsylvania Mr. Bryan made certain explicit declarations. He charged that the Pennsylvania delegation was taken from him by "conspiracy," against the expressed wish of a majority of the Democratic voters in their caucuses, and this morning were still facing Denver. The delegation to the convention is owned by Bryan, sewed up in such a way that it cannot get away for all time comes they will do what Bryan tells them to do.

There was desultory talk about the platform and Colonel James M. Guffey of Pennsylvania sedately left the reservation and came back to the imperial city step by the fact that Bryan kicked him out before he decided to go. Charles F. Murphy of New York, who refused to sit in the band wagon on Friday night, ignored the regular caucuses and the usual amount of pitch was peddled by the little peddlers.

Why Bryan is Using the Iron Heel.

Through it all was the undertone: "Why is Bryan grinding us into submission in this way? Why is he so arbitrary?" and that remained the mystery of the day. The man who asked the hotel keeper at The Wyeth, Wyo., why the Pacific road removed the railroad station from the center of the village to a point a mile away, much to the discomfort of the Big Sliding people.

"Sorry to me," said the hotel keeper, "that the Union Pacific moved that station because they couldn't."

Which appears to be the answer. Bryan is doing what he wants to do, and he can do what he wants to do and there is no one who appears to be power enough of any kind to stop him.

"Must Forget Past."

"Mr. Sullivan's presence on the committee contradicts all that we can say in the party's behalf. His corporate connections would seem the perfect foil for heroes to aid the organization, but this could be left to some future convention in deal with if we were actually the choice of the Democrats of Illinois. The fact, however, that he holds his office by fraud and against the express wishes of a majority of the State convention makes it impossible for honest Democrats to associate with him as a member of the committee.

"If he refuses to resign and thus put his ambition or his business before the party's success, the answer is to elect from the committee the better man.

"What kind of scrupulous abstention from interference does Mr. Bryan call that, and what particular brand of hypocrisy is indicated by the glaring words uttered by Mr. Bryan at the Iroquois Club luncheon in New York several days ago?

"We must forget the past and work for the future. We must forget all and forgive all. For myself, I may say I have no grievance. I no longer judge a man by what he has done. The future is everything to me. I want to know what he intends to do in the future."

How can we account for this abrupt change from brutal assault to smirking palaver? Had Mr. Sullivan changed? Has he not often held "my friend" then as much as in 1906? What has happened to suddenly make it the duty of honest Democrats" to associate with him? Simply this: Everybody knows Mr. Bryan wanted the Illinois delegation to this convention, and to accomplish that purpose he did not hesitate for an instant to eat his own words.

A Political Boss.

Mr. Bryan views me with sanctimonious horror as a "political boss" who shall not be in the party organization, except "over my dead body," as a "bunkershacker" who should not be put into "my councils to betray me." "My councils." Indeed! Is the country absorbed? Has it no councils? Is Mr. Bryan the whole organization?

Let me answer Mr. Bryan's charge, and forthwith proceeds to dictate not only every political committee and every resolution of this convention, but also to put the ban upon every man in this State who has dared to oppose to his candidacy or his platform.

Does he dare his vituperation against me because I am a boss? Not at all.

I am no more a boss than Caesar. I was during the campaign when I won his appointment by trying to elect him. The only boss he hates is the "boss" opposed to his own arrogant self—the most impudent, domineering, devastating boss the Pennsylvania party has ever known.

But there is another reason. I am connected with corporations. Well, I am. I was from 1900 and in 1904 and so to-day. But I have not a dollar in any company which is not known and which I absolutely control. That, however, makes no difference. I am a "corporation" man, but it is only when opposed to Mr. Bryan. I am considered the associate of association with the one living "honest Democrat."

Time and again my help has been longer desired. It was not always so. In 1896 and 1900 the late Senator Jones many times declared there were just three men upon whom he never called for financial assistance in vain. One was the late Marcus Daly, another was William Randolph Hearst, the third was myself.

Says Bryan Sought Aid.

Through his friend and manager Mr. Bryan sought and accepted generously but speechlingly sought our aid, and we gave freely thousands and thousands of dollars. Mr. Bryan knew then and knows now that I was as much of a "corporation man" in 1896 and 1900 as I am in 1908, but did he SCRUPULE ABSTEMIOUSLY to use our money to help his campaign? Let his answer at his leisure. And what followed? After his defeat Mr. Hearst became his patron and paid him thousands of dollars, only to be turned upon without a qualm—though now, when again a candidate, Mr. Bryan fawns upon him in hope of gaining his support.

I reap my reward in a vicious, brutal attack from the man who professed to be my friend. Mr. Daly died soon enough not to feel the ingratitude of one who accepts a man's assistance and at the first refusal to serve a selfish purpose spits in his face.

This simple recital of plain facts should be sufficient to enable any fair mind to determine with certainty, at a time when harmony is the chief requisite of party success, who is the self-convicted falsifier, who the hypocrite, who the real and most arrogant "boss" ever known in the Democratic party, and who, I regret to add, the ingrate.

Arouses Followers.

The Guffey attack on Bryan produced a veritable sensation and fury among sad mirers of the Nebraskan. The moment they read it they joined in declaring that they would see to it that he was either thrown out of the convention as a delegate or as a member of the National Committee from Pennsylvania, or both.

"I don't know what Guffey thinks of Mr. Bryan," said Mayor James C. Dahlman of Omaha, one of Bryan's spokesmen, "and I don't much care. I think Mr. Bryan is one of the greatest men in America, and if Mr. Guffey has any different ideas we'll meet him right here and fight it out."

Musing a moment, Dahlman added: "Do you know what? If Mr. Guffey has made these reflections on Mr. Bryan, I am in favor of voting him out of the convention."

Willis J. Abbott, Bryan's personal representative, said: "This means fight. It also means that Mr. Guffey will either be thrown out of the convention or the national committee, or both. You just watch things fly for next few days. The friends of Mr. Bryan will not tolerate such attacks upon a man who is as pure minded and pure in his life as any man on earth without a blemish. The offender, I think, that Guffey will be severely punished for this attack," said Mr. Abbott.

Colonel Robert Johnston, national committeeman from Texas, said: "It means trouble. It is most unfortunate. Guffey should not have issued such a statement."

John T. McGraw, committeeman from West Virginia, whose name Guffey mentions in his statement as one of the men who felt the lash of Bryan's interference in 1904, said:

"I am with Colonel Guffey all the way through. He has been one of the best friends that Bryan ever had. He was his devoted sponsor in the days of impending financial ald. Bryan's attacks are baseless and illogical in their basis. Guffey served him as faithfully as one man ever served another."

10 DEAD FROM HEAT IN BOSTON TORRID WAVE

ALL RECORDS FOR FOURTEEN YEARS BROKEN. MANY FATALITIES IN NEW YORK.

Boston's death record in the hot wave up to to-day is ten. The heat wave has lasted for seventeen days, and is a record-breaker. Over sixty have been prostrated. Five were killed by heat in New York to-day.

To-day is most unbearable of all. There is no relief in sight for Boston, according to the Weather Bureau.

In addition to the physical breakdowns there are mental disorders caused by the high temperature. These disorders manifest themselves often in disturbances against the peace, petty crimes and even serious assaults, as the overwrought human system gives way under the continued strain and the tight-wire of human patience snaps off short.

The usual 8 a. m. observation at the weather bureau to-day showed a temperature of 80 degrees. Within the next hour it jumped four degrees higher, making it 84 by 9 a. m. At 11 o'clock it was 86. This was four degrees in excess of the mercury at the same time yesterday. The heat on Sunday ran up to 90 degrees toward afternoon.

Baked to a Crisp.

The humidity is very low, only 58 per cent. This is 12 per cent. below normal and spares humanity the distressing stickiness that only aggravates intense heat.

This hot wave set in on June 19 with a maximum temperature for that day of 86 degrees. Since then the thermometer has been over 80 on all except five days.

In 1901 there was a stretch of eight days of unusual heat, but not since 1894 have there been seventeen such days in succession.

The following tables of comparative heat for June 19 to July 5, 1894, and for the past seventeen days are as follows:

MAXIMUM TEMPERATURE.

Forecaster Sees No Break.

The forecast for to-day is discouraging. It reads:

"Fair to-day and Tuesday. Light southwest winds."

To this Forecaster Smith adds:

"There is no break in sight for the heat to-day. The humidity is lower and by to-morrow night or Wednesday we may get a shower. But the temperature will continue high, so far as present indications go."

At 8 a. m. to-day there was only one place in the country hotter than Boston. That was Charleston, S. C., which had 84 degrees. At 8 p. m. Boston's heat temperature then was 80. Other 8 a. m. temperatures to-day: Quebec, New York 78, Washington 80, San Francisco 54, Chicago 78, Buffalo 76, Pittsburg 76, St. Louis 86.

The lowest temperature was sent in from Helena, Mont., which was comfortable at 40 degrees.

Heat Toll on Sunday.

The sun's toll for the Sabbath was one life and six prostrations.

From a temperature of 90 degrees yesterday afternoon the mercury dropped sixteen degrees in the early night hours till it stood at 74 degrees at midnight. This record was given by the weather bureau men and was a drop of 4 per cent. to-day the record at both places was 78 degrees.

A NEW BEAUTY BOOK.

"Art of Massage" is a clever book just issued by the Charles Company, manufacturers and proprietors of the well-known Dr. Charles Flesh Food. It is highly instructive, interesting and well written. It explains the various methods and explains the various movements which are illustrated in the book. It describes the proper treatment for the face, neck, arms and bust, and as massaging properly done is the veritable fountain of youth, all women should be more or less interested in the subject. More especially is this book of value because comparatively few women can afford the services of an expert masseuse. "Art of Massage" also contains many valuable hints on the health and care of the complexion.

Any of our readers who would like to have a copy of this book may procure one gratis by simply addressing The Dr. Charles Flesh Food Company, 752 Fulton street, Brooklyn, New York.

COUGHLIN CHOICE OF BAY STATE MEN

By WILLIAM H. ROSS.

DENVER, July 6.—The Massachusetts delegation to the Democratic National convention is on the battle field. They arrived yesterday afternoon, after a three days' continuous ride from Boston broken only by three hours off the train while visiting Bryan at Lincoln.

Part of the delegation left the train at Colorado Springs to see that Summer resort, but George Fred Williams, Colonel A. C. Dodge and Chairman J. W. Sprague of the State Committee sat others came right through. Shortly after the Massachusetts men arrived a high wind from the mountains swept the town and a blinding dust storm made the streets as uncomfortable as a desert.

The delegation made its headquarters at the Hotel Savoy. There was a howl over accommodations as soon as the delegates saw their rooms. Such sleeping provisions as a room with one bed and a small cot had been made for four men.

There are 25,000 strangers in the city now and 75,000 more coming. It is a crowd that shouts for Bryan only.

Mayor Tom Johnson of Cleveland came to Denver with the Bay State men. When asked his opinion of Bryan's chances, Mayor Johnson said:

"I believe he has the best chance he ever had. It is going to be a clear cut campaign between the privileged classes and the unprivileged.

Bryan Is Stronger, Says Tom Johnson.

"Mr. Bryan is no stronger as a candidate with the big business interests in the East than he has ever been. Such interests are opposed to him now as before. That is stronger with the little business interests. He is stronger with radical Republicans.

"Taft and Sherman is the most plutocratic ticket ever nominated. The Chicago platform of 1908 is the most plutocratic ever adopted. Mr. Taft does not represent Roosevelt. He represents the privileged classes.

"Mr. Bryan is stronger with the workingmen than before, I believe. They understand the situation better. The exposure of the methods of the privileged class will have its effect upon the people when it comes time to vote.

"The interests opposed to Mr. Bryan want a conservative ticker nominated by both parties so that they will not be disturbed, no matter which wins. Mr. Bryan is sufficiently conservative in his views. He is not as radical as I and a lot more of us are.

"Democratic Party Ought to Clean House."

"The platform will be the right kind of platform. Though I have had to go to a Democratic national convention as a minority kicker, but I am pretty well satisfied with the situation this trip.

"The Democratic party ought to get the aid of the Pennsylvania Guffys and the Guffys in other States. It ought to clean house, and get rid of the men who are tents of Standard Oil, the banking, the railroad and the other privileged interests.

FIND BOND'S ESTATE GREATLY ENTANGLED

UNWISE INVESTMENTS SCATTERED WEALTH OF PHILANTHROPIST, STATE ST. BELIEVES.

The greatest mystery still surrounds the affairs of Charles H. Bond, Boston's multi-millionaire philanthropist, cigar manufacturer and real estate investor, who was found drowned in a bathtub at his palatial Summer home in Swampscott last Friday, and whose funeral was held privately at 1:30 o'clock this afternoon.

State Street, however, believes Mr. Bond was financially involved and that his fortune was cut into heavy in unwise investments. It is certain his affairs are in such condition that it will take a long period to straighten them.

Even Mr. Bond's most intimate personal friends and closest business associates cannot predict with any degree of accuracy what will be shown by the investigation that is to be made. His fortune, it had been supposed, was immense. His property holdings were large. His speculations and his investments were heavy.

Trustee Is Confident.

Arthur W. Newell, president of the Fourth National Bank, one of the trustees named in the deed of trust given by Mr. Bond on May 18, when, it is said, Bond's real estate investments became so involved that he was persuaded to shift them to other shoulders, said to-day that he believed Mr. Bond's affairs to be in good condition, notwithstanding all reports to the contrary.

"The circumstances surrounding his death," said Mr. Newell, "is not a matter that concerns his trustees. Anything we can tell concerning the manner of Mr. Bond's death or the fact that he left, must come from the family. The trustees cannot talk of those things."

Mr. Newell intimated that the trustees might make an official statement soon. Beyond that he would not talk.

John C. F. Slayton, the Blackstone street produce merchant, who was a lifelong friend of Mr. Bond, and the other co-trustee named with Mr. Newell in Bond's deed of trust, was in Swampscott to-day in consultation with Mrs. Bond and her daughters.

Saint Hatte Theatre Work.

Work on the Lyric Theatre, at Washington and Warrendon streets, has been stopped for the day. This was one of Mr. Bond's undertakings. He had planned to build a $500,000 playhouse, which, he often said, would be one of the finest in New England.

The dress are still going to-day under the dead engineer and the contractors, H. H. Keyes & Company, say they believe work will be resumed in a day or two. The excavation is nearly complete and the foundations are well along.

Only a few relatives and close friends, besides members of the immediate family, were at the funeral of Mr. Bond. The remains are cremated at Mount Auburn Cemetery.

DURING DREAM ENDS HIS LIFE WITH BULLET

Manager of Boston Publishing House Victim of Somnambulism.

NEW YORK, July 6.—His nervous system shattered to such extent from overstudy that he became a somnambulist and for months had to be guarded while he slept, Josiah H. Vose, local manager of a Boston publishing concern, at well known in that city, got out of bed in his sleep while his guards were absent and shot himself dead in the home of his friend and business associate, Jacob Wise Brown, in White Plains.

No stranger suicide, perhaps, is recorded in the criminal annals of the country. Steep bound Vose's mind, but not his body, when he committed the deed. He did not realize what he was doing. By his own violent, though unconscious act, he passed from his restless slumber to death by firing a bullet into his brain.

He died instantly.

Unknown for Three Days.

The Coroner and physicians say there was scarcely an instant's interval of consciousness. For three days the body lay where it fell, and when it was discovered the revolver was clutched tightly in the dead man's hand. There was a pool of blood on the floor.

Vose's family had gone to Newton Highland, a suburb of Boston, to spend the Summer, and Vose was lodging at the home of his friend, Brown. The former did not know he suffered from somnambulism and insomnia, and consequently when they went on their vacation, they left him without a guard. Sleeplessness, on the night of the tragedy, alternated with sleepwalking with the victim, and in the dead of the night he arose and killed himself.

Vose was neither seen nor heard from the time he went to his room Thursday evening, on Friday, the servants took away. No one, therefore, noticed his fall are to suppose Friday or Saturday. When the body was discovered the eyes were still wide open, in the stare peculiar to sleepwalkers.

Burial at Milton.

The body was clad in pajamas. The dead man's right hand was extended in the direction in which the weapon pointed made it certain that the deadly bullet had been self-inflicted. Coroner Weisenberger after hearing the stories of relatives, readily accepted the sleepwalking theory and the body of Vose will be sent to Milton, Mass., for burial.

Vose was a graduate of Amherst.

SUSPECT ARRESTED IN POISON MYSTERY

POLICE HOLD PRESS MAN ON CLEW GIVEN BY WOMAN UNDERTAKER.

PHILADELPHIA, July 6.—Frederick Gies, foreman of a department in the press room of the Public Ledger publishing company of this city, was arrested early to-day after his house had been surrounded by the police all Sunday and last night. No direct charge is made against Gies, but the action of the police is in connection with their investigation of the mystery of the murder of Dr. William H. Wilson, who died June 16, after drinking a bottle of ale containing cyanide of potash, sent to him through the local express office.

Letters purporting to have come from Dr. Wilson and seemingly carried under the impression that Dr. Wilson was responsible for the death of his wife. Upon this clew the police have worked until they believe they have found a solution of the mysterious crime.

The police declare they have actually located the man who sent the ale to Dr. Wilson by tracing the circumstances in connection with the death of his wife supposed to have been a patient of Dr. Wilson, who succumbed after an operation.

Arrested on Suspicion.

"Is there any charge against Gies in connection with the Wilson murder?" Superintendent Taylor was asked.

"No. We arrested him on suspicion in connection with the murder. The wife and other peculiar circumstances, and he shall hold him until we are convinced we can establish that it was not connected with the case."

Gies's house, in the southern section of the city, had been surrounded by detectives since early to-day, while that of the family of his dead wife also was under surveillance.

Mrs. Gies died in the early part of last month at her home in the northern section of the city, and on the day following the death of her own sister, who had been staying at the home of a friend of her husband, and her body was taken at midnight to an undertaking establishment at Kensington.

Clew From Undertaker.

The undertaker, through whom the police obtained their first clew to Gies's identity, gave evidence positively to-day that the woman's body had been placed under his care a few days after June 19 last.

The death notice of a woman appeared in the Philadelphia newspapers also in the middle of last month, giving the date of her deathas many as three weeks later than the time the Kensington undertaker said the body reached his place.

According to the notice the funeral took place four days after the date of the death given in it and the interment was at a cemetery within the city limits.

It has been learned that the woman's husband was foreman of the composing room of a large publishing house in this city and therefore had at his disposal all the facilities for procuring such a deadly poison after as was sent to Wilson, to which was attributed the death of a well-known Philadelphia brewing firm.

2 CONTRACTS FOR TEAMING GO TO WOMAN

Mrs. Mary Doyle, a widow living at No. 22 Weld avenue, Jamaica Plain, who recently was awarded the contract for teaming work for the city in her home district, to-day was the lowest bidder when the bids were opened at City Hall for similar work in two other districts. The figures were filed in the name of Frank M. Doyle, her son and partner.

The Doyle bid for the West Roxbury district was $5.40 for double teams, $3.10 for singles, and $2 for extra men. For the Dorchester district it was $5.75 for double teams, $3.25 for singles and $2 for extra men. For the north Boston district it was $5.50 for double teams, Thomas J. Hannon were tied with bids of $6 for doubles, $3.50 for singles and $2 for extra men. Three other contractors had the same figures for teams, but placed the pay for extra men at $2.25 a day.

The lowest bidders for other districts and their bids were as follows: East Boston and Charlestown, John P. Scully, $5.80 for doubles, $3.45 for singles, $2.15 for extra men. Brighton, Allen Clark, $4.85 for doubles, $3.25 for singles, $2.25 for extra men; South End, T. W. McNally, $4.90 for doubles, $2.95 for singles, $2 for extra men. Back Bay, John A. Lane, $4.90 for doubles, $3 for singles, $2 for extra men. North and West Ends, Max Hurwitz, $4.70 for doubles, $2.90 for singles, $2.25 for extra men.

A committee of master teamsters went to the office of Superintendent of Streets Emerson after the bids were opened and asked that the contract blanks be made to specify that only union laborers be employed by city contractors.

ORMSBY GETS BACK HIS SON THROUGH WRIT

Judge Hammond in the Supreme Court to-day issued a writ of habeas corpus in George P. Ormsby of Washington, D. C., for the release of his two-year-old son, R. Woodbury Ormsby, out of the alleged unlawful custody of his wife, Mrs. Amy L. Ormsby, and Anna A. Johnson, matron at the Chardon Street Home. The writ is returnable to-morrow at 10 o'clock, when the case will be heard.

Earlier in the day, on motion of his own counsel, the petition for a writ of habeas corpus brought by Ormsby for the recovery of the child from the custody of United States Marshal Marchie was dismissed by Judge Dodge of the United States Circuit Court.

Ormsby declared in his petition to the Supreme Court that his child is unlawfully restrained of his liberty. The pretense for the restraint is, he declares, some decree of divorce said to have been obtained by his wife in a Western State and orders of the police officials here to Matron Johnson to hold the child. He attacks the validity of that divorce and claims it was obtained on the alleged ground that he was a resident of the Western State when he was not.

He says the child was brought by him from Washington to Boston to be at the seaside during the hot weather, and that his wife threatened to take the child back to Washington. Poor crowded family conditions and hydrophobia are raging, and where the child will be put in wholly unnecessary danger of death.

PROVIDENCE MAN HELD FOR SPEEDING

FALL RIVER, July 6.—Captured in two automobile traps near here, former Police Commissioner Henry B. Deming of Providence, R. I., will be arraigned in court here to-morrow. The police started to put up a $100 diamond ring as bail. He then started for his home in Providence, driving through Swansea, he was again arrested for speeding.

BOMB WRECKS BANK, 3 BUILDINGS BURN

TENANTS FLEE AS FLAMES FOLLOW EXPLOSION—POLICE SUSPECT PLOT.

NEW YORK, July 6.—A mysterious explosion to-day in the cellar of No. 456 Marcy avenue, Brooklyn, which the police suspect was caused by a "Black Hand" bomb, blew up the bank of Capaton & Caboni, ripped up the sidewalk in front, destroyed the building next door at No. 458, and set fire to two houses around the corner on Flushing avenue.

The shock of the explosion was felt for blocks and the entire neighborhood was thrown into a panic. The two structures on Marcy avenue were completely demolished, and the ruins were strewn over the street.

Fire followed the explosion and completed in two three-story buildings at No. 590 Flushing avenue. The ground floor was occupied as a saloon by Jacob Sicien, who with other families lived on the floors above.

The tenants fled to safety, the house was burned to the ground. The flames spread to the one-story building at No. 588 Flushing avenue, which was burned, as was a livery stable in the rear.

BLACKMAILERS IMPERIL LIVES OF 250 TENANTS

NEW YORK, July 6.—Because Francesco Gillorenzo, owner of a seven-story tenement house at Nos. 284 and 286 Mulberry street, failed to comply with the demand of blackmailers for $800, the building was set on fire early to-day and the lives of 250 tenants imperiled.

A mattress saturated with oil was found blazing in a vacant apartment on the fifth floor by Policeman Bruns, who aroused the tenants, who rushed out in panic. The fire had not gained much headway, and was quickly extinguished. The firemen found a second oil-soaked mattress in a vacant apartment on the seventh floor.

"CONTINUOUS" AT THE BOSTON

B. F. Keith is to-day celebrating the anniversary of the first continuous performances by introducing in the Boston theatre on a most remarkable scale, for the Summer months, the continuous vaudeville performance which begins at 1:30 o'clock, and will be in many respects the most notable ever given in this city. It will be continued throughout the week.

FINED OVER WATCH.

Because he couldn't find a watch which a customer left with him six weeks ago for repairs, Alfred Pisco, a jeweler at No. 19 Broadway, South Boston, was to-day fined $50 by Judge Fallon in the South Boston District Court. He appealed and was held in $300 bonds for the Superior Court.

HOLD SUSPECT IN WOBURN CASE

A man is under arrest at station 1 who, it is suspected, may be Frank Zelton, the third man wanted by the police for complicity in the shooting of three men and a boy at Woburn on February 8.

Officers O'Neil and Walsh, who were shot, have been sent for to identify the prisoner. The man was arrested at the corner of Salem and Prince streets.

TWO HELD FOR ROBBERY.

Charged with attacking Otto Helm, a South Boston man, and robbing him of his week's pay, Jeremiah Whalen, twenty-one, of No. 12 Newman street, and Daniel Sweeney, twenty-one, of No. 210 Dorchester street, were to-day held for the Grand Jury in $2500 bonds each by Judge Fallon in the South Boston District Court.

FATHER SURE TO WIN—MISS TAFT

By Boston American Leased Wire.

SAVANNAH, Ga., July 6.—No one in the Taft camp, perhaps, is more confident of the election of their former secretary as his daughter Helen, who is here visiting Miss Eva Baldwin, the roommate of Bryn Mawr College.

Miss Taft is keenly interested in politics and reads every line in the local papers about the Democratic Convention.

"Oh, the Democrats are going to fight," declared Miss Taft, enthusiastically, after reading to-day's dispatches from Denver, "and I'm glad, for it will help father. But he is going to be elected whether they fight or not."

JUDGE LAUDS PATRIOTISM

The carrying of revolvers with blank cartridges on July 4 is not within the scope of the law which forbids carrying concealed weapons, in the opinion of Judge Bruce of the Malden District Court. After hearing the cases of three men who were charged by Chief of Police Hill of Everett with violating the "concealed weapons" statute, his honor said:

"The acts of these boys are not quite within the scope of the law, as I look at it. If we start now to kill off enthusiasm on July 4, twenty-five years from now there will be no patriotism. There will be no one ready to enlist in case of war. Therefore I will hold over the fine to look into this matter and continue these cases until September 12."

The boys are Louis Mirando, George W. Frazier, Julius J. Bruno, William Mitchner and Simon Blake. They admitted carrying revolvers loaded with "blanks." William B. Lee, another boy arraigned on the same charge, was released, as he discharged his revolver on the grounds of his own home.

BEAL COUNSEL IN TROLLEY SUIT

In the United States Circuit Court today Henry W. Beal, whose office is No. 102 Ames Building, filed notice that he would appear for the defendants in the suit brought by the United States against the New York, New Haven & Hartford Consolidated Street Railway Company and the Providence Securities Company. In this suit the department of justice will attempt to make the New Haven Railroad surrender its great railway holdings in this Commonwealth. Attorney Beal was given until the first Monday in August to file an answer to the suit.

NO LABOR TROUBLES IN THE PAPER MILLS

BANGOR, July 6.—A. Ledyard Smith, who represents Garrett Schenck, president of the Great Northern Paper Company, said to-day that there will be no labor troubles at Millinocket this year, the company having made satisfactory contracts, extending over two years, with the employes. He says that there is no foundation for the reports sent out that the big paper mills were to close, or that they would return to the "piecework" arrangement.

The Manicure Lady Tackles the Labor Problem

She Laments the Hard Feelings Between the Hired and Those That Hire Them.

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

THE Swede porter was making an awful howl to the Head Barber because he had been asked to scrub the floor twice in an afternoon.

"Ay ant stand very much longer for dis har barber shop!" he informed the Head Barber. "A lon in dots floor pieces. Ay ta' yu' Ay s'pose yu tenk Ay han one of dese har vire slaves?"

"It's just awful, George," said the Manicure Lady, when Ole had marched out with his chin up. "I never saw so much strained relations between capital and labor in my life.

"Ya went on a strike yesterday, and goodness knows when he'll go back to work.

"Brother Wilfred had a job two days last week, but quit because the foreman told him to get a move on. You know my brother is that sensitive in his soul that he can't endure none of them harsh words from people who is richer than he may be over him for the time being, is much beneath him in inference."

"That ain't the right spirit," declared the Head Barber. "Every time your brother ought to be ashamed of himself, being financially able, why should he be independent, I'd like to know? It's not that your old man's on a strike, I suppose the union works to nights for you."

Ought to Get Together

"Well, hardly," said the Manicure Lady. "Pa's got quite a bankroll saved up, so he won't take nothing from the union nor nobody. But just the same I think it's too bad that capital and labor can't get together."

"They're getting together all the time," said the Head Barber. "Only the other day I came together just last night. He told me he hadn't fallen off from his job in years and I took the head chair, and I told him it was because people was all out of town. He said that if things didn't pick up there would be one more out of town, looking for a job. And that's the way we shot it at each other.

"I wouldn't work for nobody!" declared the Manicure Lady. "When a girl is her own boss she can, anyhow, hold up her head, and when she has to work for a stuck up capitalist she's all the time looking around kind of nervous like for another job.

"Some days I don't take in no more than one dollar, but I'm my own boss, and nobody telling me where to get off. As Mister Shakespeare says, 'To be free or not to be free.'

"Even in times where there ain't no hard work there's the same feeling between the hired men and them that hires them.

Hard on Human Tempers

"I seen in the paper last week where Cecil Yane, the hoy tenor, was going to ask the manager of the show because the manager wouldn't let Cecil sing a song he wrote himself. That's the way with a kid up and down the line, especially in dog days. It's a wonder folks hold their temper as well as they do.

"Maybe better times is coming," sighed the Manicure Lady, "and after Mister Taft is elected President things will settle down a little. I'll be plumer satisfied then, I think. Governor Johnson will go back to Minnesota, Bryan will go home and write 'The Third Battle,' Teddy Roosevelt will go down to Africa after big game, and altogether times will brighten up.

"Speaking of Teddy, I'd give three of my best razors to see one of them African buffaloes, that has the long horns and never combs their hair, chasing Teddy through the jungle. I don't guess that Teddy will find hunting big game in Africa anything like that San Juan Hill proposition."

"I ain't so sure," said the Manicure Lady. "Mister Roosevelt and that big stick has always batted pretty good."

"They was so far, with things breaking right," admitted the Head Barber, "but I don't know that Teddy would hit much if he came up in a pinch."

DIVORCE---MODERN SOCIETY'S GAME OF DIABOLO

Mrs. Wm. H. Taft's Views on the Subject Discussed

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

"Divorce has become the amusement of the idle and unemployed rich, like the game of Diabolo."

"Men and Women Find Sport in Catching Partners on a String, Juggling Them for a Time and Then Tossing Them Down"

Copyright, 1908, by American Journal-Examiner

THE ideas expressed by Mrs. William H. Taft on the divorce evil of the day are sane, wholesome and sensible. There is no other question of greater importance before the world at this time.

Divorce has become an amusement of the idle and unemployed rich, like the game of Diabolo.

Men and women find sport in catching partners on a string, and juggling with them for a time, and then tossing them down and running after new sports.

The matrimonial experience of a woman in the United States who has been six times married, and three times to one husband, shows how vulgar and cheap human beings can become by too great laxity in the marriage and divorce laws.

Third Marriages Common

It is an everyday matter to meet women who have three living husbands, and men with an equal number of wives.

The same condition of domestic misery and quick and easy divorce existed at the decline of the Roman Empire. It preceded the fall of that nation.

Until all buildings are absolutely fireproof, there must be fire escapes. Until people are developed into such a state of wisdom and self-control that unhappy marriages cannot occur, there must be "divorce escapes" attended to the matrimonial structure.

The misfortune lies in the fact that to-day such a large percentage of people are using the "divorce escape" for the most trivial cause, and making themselves as conspicuous and unpleasant a sight as if they used the fire escapes of their homes for means of ordinary exit.

In the days of the Medicis, divorce was difficult, but poison was resorted to by unhappy wives and husbands in those times, with frightful frequency.

Poison Was the Old Method

The poison artist, who knew how to conceal death in a ring or a bouquet, or a bonbon, was as popular and opulent a person, in that age, as the divorce expert of this era.

Between the two evils, our own vice is preferable to the crime of the past, but it has become so obtrusive, so disgusting, so common, that it has sounded its own doom.

The world will ere another decade begin to swing back toward its old, real ideals of constancy, loyalty and faithfulness. For these are the ideals dwelling in the heart of humanity, despite the ugly manifestations which appear in society, of an opposite nature.

Happiness in marriage is worth working and waiting for. It is worth studying as a profession. It requires continual application, self-denial and self-analysis, patience and devotion, and most of all, deep and abiding love.

These qualities are not taught by society leaders as a rule to their sons and daughters; they are not taught at fashionable schools and colleges; and they are not popular among the "smart set," as a rule. And it is among these people that the vice of divorce thrives and grows to its rankest state.

The deserted wife, the wife of the hopeless drunkard, the wife of the flagrantly unfaithful and dissolute man, needs the divorce escape to preserve her self-respect, and to prevent peopling the world with undesired and diseased children; "illegitimate" children of hatred and disgust.

But before a man reaches such a state of mental degeneracy, many a wife could reclaim him and bring him back to be the lover who wooed her, did she not at the first danger signal fly to the divorce court.

Every man begins marriage with an intention of making a good husband. It depends largely upon the tact, the skill, the patience, the wisdom and the love of the woman he marries whether he fills the obligation.

The divorce reform must begin with woman. It is her work.

Divorce has helped the world to establish higher standards of marital rights for women. It has been the means of making men realize that wives were entitled to more privileges than shelter and food, and it has been one of the keys which unlocked so many doors to self-support for woman.

An Enemy to Woman's Peace

Time was when no redress, no legal protection, no way of escape, awaited the wife who gave her labor, her loyalty, and her very life, to a miserly, selfish, tyrannical man who considered her secondary to his horse or dog.

But while divorce has been the friend of such women, it has become the enemy to the peace of the sex and to the security of the nation, through the abuses to which it has been put by the restless rich and the vicious seekers after excitement and novelty.

It is time that some wise, consistent and reasonable system of laws was established which would prevent divorce from becoming a national game—like football or baseball.

How the Voice of the Scoffer Was Stilled

And Why Is It That Men Won't Admit That They Miss Their Wives When Absent?

By KENNETT HARRIS

"I HAVE been young, and now, by the unthinking. I am considered a trifle elderly, but I have never known the scoffer to flourish," remarked the good Old Chastened Soul. "Down in the bottom of your heart you know that you will be sorry to have your wife leave you, even for a short vacation, and you will be glad to have her back."

"Have I said anything that would indicate the contrary?" asked the Member with the Vandyck Beard.

"You have said nothing, but when you indulge in what is meant for a knowing wink, and make an ostentatious use of your pocket handkerchief, afterward affecting to wring tears from the fabric, you are trying to lead us to suppose that your joy at your wife's departure is as unconfined as a predatory trust magnate," said the Good Old Chastened Soul, severely. "I strongly disapprove of even pantomimic intimation of the kind, contrary to the fact that binds."

"That's right, too," agreed the Callow Cub, who had paused by the group to listen.

"I'm with you on that proposition also," said the Ancient with the Red Gills, "before he indulges in such a vice, there is a tendency to lightness in the younger generation, when referring to the Sacred Institution. It behooves us to frown upon it. Observe me frown!" He knitted his withered countenance in a ferocious scowl.

"Oh, there's a pair of crutches, you are," said the Member with the Vandyck Beard, "and a pretty picture of you two pining and moping if the partners of your sorrows trusted you enough to go off for a month."

Pure, Unalloyed Bliss

"He's a scoffer, all right," remarked the Ancient with the Red Gills, shaking his head sadly.

"In my youth I knew a man named Themistocles Cooper," said the Good Old Chastened Soul. "Misty" was the name to call him. "Misty," at an early age, married the girl of his choice and settled down to a life of the purest and most unalloyed connubial bliss that you ever heard of."

"I don't know," said the Ancient with the Red Gills, seriously. "I think that pure and unalloyed connubial bliss is altogether the rule. It is possible that there is occasional grumbling, but I am inclined to doubt it."

"I can only go by my own experience, which has been a happy one," said the Callow Cub, "and I am indifferent."

"As I was saying when I was rudely interrupted, Themistocles Cooper married and settled down," the Good Old Chastened Soul resumed, "and it happened that occasionally his wife had to visit her mother in Keokuk. The Coopers lived in Des Moines."

"On these occasions I never saw a more unhappy man than Misty," said the Good Old Chastened Soul. "His expression was utterly woebegone, and he declared that the whole time of his wife's absence, which was sometimes prolonged a few days, that he couldn't wait for the postman to get her daily letter. He used to walk down to the postoffice, which was a mile distant from his house, and wait for the mail to be distributed, and, although fairly overflowing with correspondence, he would positively snatch the letter from the clerk and then tear it open and go on reading it, bumping into everybody he met, without a word of apology.

"He had a big office calendar hung up in his room, and the last thing he did before retiring was to draw a big black mark through the day of the month, and count those that remained before that promised date of her return."

Darby and Joan Again

"I think that was very sweet and lovely of him," remarked the Member with the Vandyck Beard. "What else?"

"Are they still alive?" asked the Callow Cub, adding that the Good Old Chastened Soul "They must be quite a Darby and Joan by this time."

The Member with the Vandyck Beard and the Ancient with the Red Gills nudged each other.

"They are still alive," replied the Good Old Chastened Soul, "and, as you suppose, they are quite a Darby and Joan. Old Themistocles is getting rather infirm, but his devotion to his wife is as great as ever, and he never goes on earth in business, nor even from his room for more than a few hours is just as content.

"It's the prettiest sight in the world to see them together; he so tender and careful of her, she so loving and so solicitous of him. A pair of lovers at seventy-odd."

"I'm inclined" said the Ancient with the Red Gills, "Marmaduke, it's clearly up to us. And, rising, he put a hard and sustained pressure on the button.

One Way a Girl Can Tell

By AUDREY

THE Commuter had kept his head in the newspaper for nearly ten minutes; Cecelia was screwed into an anatomical impossibility, trying to read an advertisement on the back of the paper; every time she got to the price of the lingerie article advertised, the Commuter would give the paper a shake and leave her in ignorance of how much it cost. It was aggravating.

"I'd like to know who started the idea that it is a man's right to keep a newspaper as long as he pleases at the breakfast table."

"Women don't need literature," mumbled the Commuter from the depths of the stock markets. "Did you ever hear that the world is the book of woman?"

"Indeed, I did not, Lady. "But women do learn more outside of books than in them; for instance, if he slams the door on entering, she may not ask him to subscribe to her pet charity. If he says four gaudy new waistcoats, there is a handsome stenographer in the office; if he reads the paper all through breakfast, something in the butter weekly, stocks have gone down."

Cecelia now interrupted. "Yes, that is all very well, but those are the observations of a married woman, she can study him near at hand. How can a girl tell anything about bachelors?"

My Lady looked reminiscent. "Do you remember Mary Elton, who visited me after she left school?"

"Pretty, pretty!"

"Yes, and nice, too, and not a bit mercenary, made me know a big black mark reason why she discouraged Jimmy Goldhill!"

"Give it up."

"Been credit."

"You don't mean?"

"Yes, but that Jimmy drove her about in expensive showy traps, and left a number of startling showy things like her, but when Mary got her box of cheap candy she shook her head. Now, why need to have bought me anything? I never would have missed it. But cheap candy—the best or none for me!"

The Commuter peered around the edge of the paper, just like a woman, to throw down a good fellow for some fool thing like that.

"The world is the book of woman," quoted Cecelia, and though it was a little, she judged right, for I know a man who says that bachelor Jimmy is the stingiest thing on earth in business. He would probably have kept an automobile for his wife, and made her account for 'that quarter I gave you yesterday.'"

"Speaking of candy," said My Lady, "where did you get those boxes for the Jones'?"

"Train time," said the Commuter.

Sidelights on Matrimony by a Sympathetic Spinster

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

"BELLE," said the Spinster Lady, gazing critically at her friend, "you need a new Spring suit badly. They are having a sale at ——— Come on out with me and we'll look for one."

"I know I look fearfully shabby, but I don't quite see how I can manage it this month. Henry says the bills are far too large already."

"Well," said the Spinster Lady rebelliously "I don't see why you should look shabby, even if they are. Henry is the best-dressed man in town, and hasn't he just bought a new trotting horse? Besides, I heard him tell Uncle James that this was the best year his business had ever known. Go on and get the suit, without saying anything about it to Henry."

"Oh, my dear, I wouldn't dare do such a thing. You don't know how particular Henry is, he goes over every item in the bills. I have to account for every cent."

"Do you mean to tell me that you have to ask his permission every time you buy a thing for yourself, the children or the house?"

"Yes, indeed, I do. You know I never have any money to spend. I charge everything, and the bills go to Henry every month. When we were first married I wore my trousseau until I was ashamed to meet any of the girls. I knew that Henry would think me extravagant, and so I could not bear to ask him for money to buy new things."

"He's never given you any spending money?"

"Yes, just at first," blushing painfully, "and then one time when mother needed a little money dreadfully I helped her out. Henry found out about it and stopped my allowance at once. He said he married me, not my whole family."

"But Henry has the name of being very generous; he gives to every charity, and any one who goes to him with a subscription list finds him very generous."

"Yes," said the wife, wearily. "He is very generous with his money when it makes a show, but, oh, my dear, if you knew how hard it is to get money out of him for home expenses and how I have to grind and pinch to keep up appearances!"

"Here he comes," said the Spinster Lady. "Just look at him—well dressed, complacent, while you are shabby and need to frazzle with your dress. The house on nothing. I'd like to tell him what I think of him."

"Don't, my dear, for goodness sake; it would only make him hate you and wouldn't do a bit of good."

"Well," said the Spinster Lady to herself as she nudged contentedly back to her four-room flat, "life is a pretty jumble. When Henry proposed to Belle the girl was known voted her and all the parents hoped their daughters would make as good a match.

"And there she is, poor, pretty little Belle, afraid to call her soul her own. She used to love pretty things so and always looked so trim and smart. I tell you, my dear, it's not so bad being an old maid, after all. At least you don't have to mentally crawl on your hands and knees and beg some man for every cent you spend."

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

HARD TO ADVISE

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young man of twenty-three, active in society, and have been steadily employed for the past ten years. During all of this time I have always turned in practically my entire salary. Our home consists of father (84), sister (19) and myself. My father, owing to his age, is unable to work, so I am the main support of the family. I am going with a girl a few years my junior, whom I wish to make my wife within a year or two. When I marry I would not want to have any of my relatives live with me. What I would like to know is whether it would be right for me to leave my father and sister to look out for themselves, or is it my duty to take care of them? My father has a few hundred dollars saved.

WILLIAM J. S.

I HARDLY know what to say. Your father is too old to work and your sister too young, and yet they must be taken care of in some way. Your salary would not support all of you if you married. You are young, and your fiancee even younger. Could you not wait until your sister could learn a little more, and then between you you could take care of your father? I know it is very hard to wait, but you could not neglect your father, and your sweetheart will understand that a good son makes a good husband.

LEAVE HIM ALONE

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Please advise me what to do. My chum and I are very fond of the same young man. She has known him for years, and I only met him a few months ago. My chum knows he likes me the best, and is nearly broken hearted, as she just worships him. I like the young man very much, but I would not lose him. Shall I tell him how much my chum thinks of him, or what shall I do? I hate to make them both sad.

IN TROUBLE.

YOU can discourage the young man very easily by appearing disinterested in him. When he finds that you do not care for him he will soon go back to her. As you do not care especially for him, this should not be a hard thing to do.

Humanisms

Madame Alvarez, pursued in Boston a taxicab, while Sinclair and Dalton follow after the second taxicab. Sinclair is engaged by Madame Alvarez to protect her valise, which she intrusted to him. She says a package of money and the missing necklace are in the valise. He learns that the police were after Madame Alvarez, and that it were believed that the hiding place of the valise be disclosed, and that her whereabouts be made known to Dalton and himself were awaited.

It was at this period, when Sinclair was apparently on the trail of the valise, that he received the warning of the woman already mentioned. She told him that the valise had been stolen from Madame Alvarez by Dalton, who had been following Madame Alvarez. Sinclair refused to tell any more about Madame Alvarez and after receiving his hat packet, which Dalton had left behind, he went to his home, where he received a telegram from his fiancee, Marion Marsden, saying that she would reach Boston on the next day.

Sinclair opened a letter that had been given to him by Madame Alvarez in which she warned him to beware of Dr. Mathias and his assistants. He was surprised when he opened his door in response to a knock to have Dalton, his chauffeur, appear in, with a bleeding wound on his head. The man muttered that he had been attacked in the hotel and demanded Sinclair to be on his guard.

"He is a friend of mine," Sinclair explained simply. "Will you be good enough to call a physician and see if I can have a room for him on this floor?"

The physician's hurried examination showed that while badly hurt, Dalton's injuries were not necessarily fatal. Besides the long, deep cut on the forehead, there was at the base of the skull a severe wound from some blunt instrument wielded with crushing force. Concussion of the brain was to be feared, the doctor said, but with Dalton's sturdy constitution, he would probably be laid up only a short time.

Relieved at the result of the diagnosis, Sinclair hurried to the office, leaving the doctor with the patient in a room that had been prepared for adjoining his own. He wished to make inquiries at the desk. Dalton had reached the hotel and whether he had been alone. The testimony of the porter stationed at the main entrance of the hotel confirmed his first impressions—that in this murderous assault was to be seen more of the work of the crafty Dr. Mathias.

"He came with two men and a woman in a big green car," said the porter. "I could not see their faces for the woman wore a heavy veil and the men had their caps pulled low over their eyes. They asked me to find out the number of your room. When I told them one of the two men, who was very tall and looked like a soldier, went up and helped the sick man into the elevator. When he returned he handed me a dollar and said: 'That one has been hurt in an automobile accident.' Then he jumped into the car and away they drove like mad."

Sinclair's blood boiled at the high-handed boldness of this trio of desperadoes. He showed to what lengths they would go to defeat the purposes of Madame Alvarez. Not content with almost murdering the innocent Dalton they had dared bring him to the very door of the man who had hired him as his valise was carried out her mysterious mission. Perhaps, thought Sinclair, they also had bought at this aristocratic hostelry first by a wounded man and now by one who looked, as he expressed it, "like an anarchist."

"There is a man here," said the clerk, "who will not give his name. He insists on seeing you at once on a most important matter."

"Then why don't you show him up here?" snapped Sinclair with some irritation.

"Because I thought him hardly the sort of individual you would care to receive in your room, sir," was the reply, "but if you say so I will have a boy show him up right away."

When Sinclair swung open his door two minutes later you could have knocked him over with a feather. There stood the ruffianly looking fellow who had advanced toward Mme Alvarez that memorable night, revolver in hand, and who then, at a word from her, had dropped his weapon and kissed the hem of her shirt before shrinking away like a slave.

More clews in to-morrow's instalment of the great mystery story. If the reader gets one or fails to get any of the treasure to-day, he on the other to-morrow. The American.

To Be Continued in To-morrow's American.

MOTOR CYCLE IN TREASURE HUNT IS WON

Fred A. Tucker of Waltham Captured $250 Prize on Common To-day.

Following the clew, 246 Boston Common, in to-day's instalment of "Hidden—Not Lost," in the BOSTON AMERICAN, Fred A. Tucker discovered a certificate that gave him the beautiful nickel plated motor cycle, valued at $250, which is a part of the $5,000 of treasure hidden for shrewd readers of the AMERICAN.

Mr. Tucker is a carpenter and lives at No. 11 Bacon street, Waltham. He is particularly wanted a motor cycle and will make good use of his prize. Read in to-morrow's AMERICAN how he ran down the clew.

Gets $5 at Paragon.

Pretty Miss Elizabeth M. Stewart of No. 10 Reno street, Roxbury, discovered $5 yesterday in the search at Paragon Park. The searchers at Nantasket got their gold pieces in the most unexpected places.

It proved a thoroughly delightful day's outing to those who kept their eyes open and searched out of the beaten track. Some of the happy finders were young women, and one of the excitements of the day was the Human Roulette Wheel, has not quit explaining to a public hospitality.

The queer thing about it was that several people had stood just where this young woman did and had failed to find the money. When she did discover it her eyes opened wide with surprise and pleasure.

Solves "Uncle Sam" Clew.

William Joseph of No. 63 Bainbridge street, Charlestown, was one of the Paragon gold hunters yesterday. He got $5. He has been following the story, "Hidden —Not Lost," since it began and has been rewarded for his cleverness with two $5 gold pieces.

Another of the winners, where the ball loon went up and parties heard open air opera, yesterday, was Charles E. Gilson of No. 3 Walnut avenue, Roxbury. He got $5.

In Thursday's AMERICAN appears a clew to treasure. It is very mentioned "Uncle Sam," which looked perfectly obvious. No one hunted down the clew on Thursday. The next day the clew was made plainer. It was pointed out that "Uncle Sam" meant mail. Still no one seemed to get wise. The clew was repeated Saturday and yesterday.

Then George Priestley of No. 110 Pleasant street got on the scent. Priestly is a born detective, but he had been on the trail of the $1.00 key, and this apparently did not lead to "Uncle Sam," so he allowed the postoffice to pass for a time. But yesterday he went for Postoffice square with great care.

At Harvard Square.

The result was that in front of No. 18, directly opposite the postoffice, between a brass railing and a pillar at the entrance of the building, he discovered $5, which had been overlooked many times.

The person who found the treasure at Union Store for which a search has been made for many days is requested to report the fact at the MERICAN office.

Another search at Harvard square might reveal something.

The AMERICAN desires to repeat to its readers that they should take great care in their searches not to injure property. Nothing will be destroyed and the money discovered and recovered without injury to property.

WOULD BE SUICIDE CAN'T KILL HIMSELF

LOWELL, July 6.—After two attempts to end his life during the last twenty-four hours, George Woodward is still alive and at the City Hospital, where he was taken, the doctors say he will recover. Woodward first cut the arteries in both wrists and afterwards drank a combination of wood alcohol and corrosive sublimate.

BISHOP POTTER GAINS STRENGTH

COOPERSTOWN, N. Y., July 6.—With each passing hour hope brightens for the recovery of Bishop Henry Codman Potter, who is seriously ill from a complication of stomach and liver trouble.

While the bishop's improvement is slow it is apparently constant, and with returning strength it is believed the patient has a good chance to combat his malady.

COUNT KILLED IN DUEL.

ST. PETERSBURG, July 6.—Count Samsaeloff-Elston was killed by Count Manteuffel, an officer of the Horse guards, in a duel with pistols to-day. The men met on Krestovsky Island, on the Neva, as the result of a challenge issued by Count Manteuffel, because of a fiamly quarrel.

WRECKED TOWN WITH DYNAMITE

BANGOR, Me., July 6.—In Mattawamkeag a crowd of tardy celebrators, having been deprived by the authorities of a large cannon, obtained four sticks of dynamite which they exploded in the street in front of the Methodist Church.

The explosion shattered the doors and every window in the church, wrecked the front of Walter Robinson's store and broke every pane of glass for blocks around, while people were thrown from their beds by the force of the explosion.

NOW CONSCIOUS DOCTORS HOPE FOR RECOVERY

PITTSBURG, July 6.—Stella Duffy of No. 619 Quincy street, Dorchester, Mass., known as Mde Vail, whom she was so seriously injured while looping the loop at Luna Park Friday, returned to consciousness this morning and is very much improved.

At St. Francis's Hospital it is now stated that she will probably recover.

She spent a good night last night and when she left this morning she returned to full consciousness. The physicians announced that unless complications of some such nature as she will fully recover in a short time.

FACE TO FACE WITH DEATH IN THRILLING LOOP LEAP

To-day and to-morrow the Sunday American Outing Club will have a treat at Wonderland, being admitted free to the park and its great attractions and to Manning's "Trained Animals," the funniest of funny productions, and using half fare coupons to the merry-go-round and to the miniature railway.

The perilous feat of Dare-Devil Babcock is attracting more attention with every passing day, and it is declared to be one of the greatest acts being presented in Summer amusement places this year.

It is a thrilling one, to be sure, but the feat it is appreciated, for the skill and nerve displayed by Babcock as he descends the incline, loops the loop and jumps the gap with wind whizzing and nerves unstrung, the dangerous side of the performance look easy.

For instance, Babcock is sometimes held back, often by sudden gusts of wind blowing through and around the great structure, fifty feet at one end, twenty-five feet tall in the loop and nine feet above the boards at the finish.

The tracks are fastened at the bottom but at the top of the loop are barely touchable, they gathering a smooth speed on the return down the loop.

This shows that the wheel barely touches the top of the loop, and there have been several instances where his bicycle actually leaped across the top of the loop, not touching for a distance of eight or ten feet.

"It is all in the speed," said Babcock. "If I start six inches higher I would be going too swiftly, while if I start from the trap door and get hurt. If I start a trifle lower down I would lose momentum on top of the loop without touching. The slightest change in these things can be fatal a while, and then one needs his nerve.

"Three times the wind has sprung the trap just as I was about to start fifty feet above. I don't mind telling you that danger ties largely right there. Suppose I was half-way down the incline and the wind sprung the trap. I would shoot the jump my bicycle off the track and take chances tumbling into the arena rather than butt head first into a hard wood wall of the loop.

"During my first act at Wonderland I was retarded by miscalculation in setting the machine, and although I made the loop I only had twelve inches to spare jumping the gap. Wednesday night the track was wet at the finish and my wheels skidded until I came within a few inches of jumping the boards.

"Several times this year I have made the loop on the outer edge within three inches of eternity, blowing over by a sudden gust through the loop. But, after all, here is where my old bicycle training comes in and I managed every time to finish right side up."

Guests of the SUNDAY AMERICAN are encouraged to use their free tickets early this week and tomorrow and avoid the rush of free ticket holders to Wonderland and Dorchester.

PEARY'S SHIP STARTS FOR NORTH POLE

NEW YORK, July 6.—Lieutenant Peary's ship, the Roosevelt, bound on an Arctic exploring expedition, cast off from its land ing at the foot of East Twenty-fourth street at 1 o'clock this afternoon and slowly steamed away, while flags fluttered and a small knot of people cheered. The Roosevelt starts on the perilous undertaking of finding the North Pole, or at least charting some of the unknown seas which lie in the extreme North.

It was planned that the Roosevelt should drop anchor at Oyster Bay and allow President Roosevelt the chance of boarding the ship which bears his name to wish Godspeed to the crew. Yesterday Mr. Roosevelt was visited by scores of sightseers.

The Peary Arctic Club issued a number of invitations, which were sent out by President Hubbard and Secretary Peckham, inviting scientists interested in the work of exploration to board the Roosevelt and ride as far as City Island. The invitations were generally accepted.

Mrs. Peary, with her two children, Marie and Robert E. Peary, Jr., accompanied her husband to the Roosevelt. She did not seem to enter into the spirit of those about her, and said to an AMERICAN reporter:

"I hope God will spare my husband and bring him back to me. Only wives can know how I feel. This moment, when I should perhaps be proudest of my husband and of the plaudits he receives, is really one of the keenest pain. Each time he starts on one of these expeditions, I can't help fearing that he may never come back."

50,000 MEN RESUME WORK

PITTSBURG, July 6.—When whistles blew in the Pittsburg district to-day 50,000 men, who have been idle for several months, answered the call to work. The Carnegie Steel Company, which has been operating the Homestead, Edgar Thomson and Duquesne plants on half time, placed these mills on full time, giving work to several thousand men. Arrangements are also being made to blow in several additional blast furnaces owned by the company during the week.

The Jones & Laughlin Steel Company put 2,000 additional men at work in its plant here, while the National Tube Works put as many more additional men at work. The Pressed Steel Car Company and the Standard Steel Car Company also opened their doors to an army of men.

MANCHESTERS SHORT OF CASH

LONDON, July 6.—The evident desire of the Duke and Duchess of Manchester to avoid notice and their economical habits are attracting great attention, they apparently being short of cash.

The fishing and shooting rights of Kylemore Castle have been let by the Duke for $10,000. The Manchesters never entertain, rarely giving even a small dinner. When visiting London the Duke and Duchess seem rather to avoid society. The Duke is extremely economical, shopping in the end and even hiring hotel carriages but using a brougham borrowed from his friend, Lady Lister Kaye.

PROCTER & GAMBLE CO. NAPHTHA SOAP

An Interesting Experiment

It will enable you to determine the value of P. & G. Naphtha Soap. Try it!

Make a strong suds of P. & G. Naphtha Soap and cold or lukewarm water.

Put into this all the dirty dish-cloths you have. Let them soak for an hour. If any dirt spots remain, rub them lightly with the soap. Remove the cloths. Rinse them in clear water. Hang them up to dry.

Look at them an hour later. They are as clean as when new—free from grease and without odor of any kind.

The point of this little experiment is this: If P. & G. Naphtha Soap will clean dirty dish-cloths quickly, easily and thoroughly, how much more quickly and easily will it clean bedlinen, table-cloths, pillow-cases, skirts, shirt waists and articles of a similar nature which are not, and never were, one-tenth as dirty as the dish-cloths?

AUTOISTS GATHER AT BUFFALO

BY J. C. KERRIGON.

BUFFALO, N. Y., July 6.—The delegates to the good roads and legislative convention of the American Automobile Association, which convenes here to-morrow morning, are arriving on each incoming train, and present indications are that the meeting will be the largest and best that has been held in this country.

The greater portion of the Massachusetts delegation arrived here early this morning, the delegation consisting of Chairman Parker of the Massachusetts Highway Commission, W. H. Cunee, J. W. Maguire, John Inglish, A. H. Converse, L. R. Speare and H. R. Barbeck. Other members of the Massachusetts delegation will arrive here to-morrow morning.

There will be something like 300 members in attendance, representing no less than fifty-eight clubs, and representatives of twenty-one States, the latter being appointed by the chief executive of the several States. The local organization has done everything to make the stay of the visitors pleasant, and outside of the regular session of the convention has arranged for entertainment.

This afternoon about 200 tourists arrived, some coming from Cleveland, others from Pittsburg and a large crowd from Rochester.

Bay State A. A. Has a Team.

Besides the convention the starting of the annual tour of the A. A. A. is attracting no end of attention. This tour starts on Thursday morning and will have no less than fifty cars, that number having already been entered, while three other entries are anticipated. The Bay State Automobile Association has a team in the contest this year, consisting of three Marmons, while three other members of the club are driving cars in the name of other organizations.

There are six clubs represented in the contest, the Buffalo, with two teams; the Bay State, Columbus, Rochester, Syracuse and Detroit, each with one team. The Springfield Club has two teams entered, and unless a third entry is made within a day or so, the two Stevens will have to travel as non-contestants, as it takes three cars to make a team.

Two women will drive on the tours, namely Mrs. Cuneo, who is entered for the Glidden tour, and Mrs. F. W. Shipley, who has entered for the Hower trophy. These women will undoubtedly make an interesting showing.

The correct list of entries and the clubs they represent are as follows:

GEORGE GANO THE FEATURE OF THE CARD

COMBINATION PARK, Medford, July 6.—All eyes were centred on the pacing gelding George Gano, 2:24½, driven by "Doc" Shoff, in the 2:25 pace, which is the 2:24 class this afternoon, it being his initial race of the year and his future engagements, including many of the classic pacing futures down the Grand Circuit.

It was not anticipated that the field opposing Gano to-day was fast enough to make his victory a matter of doubt, but the critics felt that he could have a hard enough race that some kind of a line on his ability could be determined.

Two other events filled out the day's card, the 1:18 trot and 2:35 trot, the latter for half-mile heats.

WINNERS OF POINT CUPS IN DOUBT TILL FINAL RACE

BY ED. COGSWELL.

Four trotters and six pacers have each a chance in winning the prize cup for points in the Spring series of matinees held at Charles River speedway under the auspices of the Metropolitan Driving Club, though the matinee of to-morrow is the final one of the ten listed.

For the trotters Dodie K. stands to take the trophy for having the fastest average time in a race, while Chase looks to have the cup for winning the fastest heat in the series. As only one prize can go to any one horse, this leaves Lord Quet the leader for points, he having 26 to his credit, but Billy Ross and Ainley H. are only one point behind with 25, and Hills Boy with 24 points has a remote chance of pulling out at the final minute through his winning and the others standing low in the summary of their respective races.

In the pacing division Claymos has the cup for the best average time in a race as good as settled in his favor, while Mc Star comes in for the trophy going to the horse winning the fastest heat. This may seem peculiar, as Claymos has pared the course in 57¾, against 59 for Mc Star, and, too, has the best average time in a race, but being restricted to just one prize places My Star in line for the other.

For the point cup Edith J. has 24 points one more than has Corbett, and Dean Swift, while Bobby Patchen has earned 20, Phoebon W. 28 and Alhambra 26. The only chance the last named has is in Edith J. not starting, when he might tie her in points by winning, but the other four just below Edith J. have each an opportunity by having success and the rest running against a streak of hard luck.

Following is the standing of the trotters and pacers having won seventeen points and over in the nine matinees to date:

7 YANKEE MOTOR BOATS BUILT TO BEAT BRITONS

Seven motor boats have been built for the defense of the British international cup, and the races to select the three defenders will take place off Huntington, L. I., on Friday and Saturday. There will be two races on Friday and one on Saturday, and from the showing made in those three contests the regatta committee will select the three that are to meet the challengers for the trophy.

It is understood that other boats have been built to take part in these trials, and Walter M. Boling, the secretary of the Motor Boat Club of America, announces that all entries must be in his hands to-day, when it was announced some time ago the entries would close. Up to 2 P. M. to-day, however, the late boat boats built have overlooked the end-all it seemed that they will see that the formal entry is made in time and no one some regrets.

Mr. Boling has received a formal notification that the British club will send over the Wolseley Siddeley and the Daimler II. The Wolseley Siddeley is owned by the Duke of Westminster and the Daimler II by Lord Howard de Walden.

It is possible that some French boats may come, as the Frenchmen talked of taking part in the international contest. They still have time to make an entry, but now are completing the entry seems to be small.

The Wolseley Siddeley while at Monaco made a record of 39.2 miles per hour and since then it is said she has been improved very much. The Daimler II was built last year and was equipped with three 6-cylinder engines. These have been removed and in their place two eight-cylinder motors have been substituted and each of these is of 200 horse-power. Last year with the old motor she made twenty-six nautical miles and she must have been very much improved this year or Lord de Walden would not have sent her across the Atlantic. These two boats are to be shipped here by the Hamburg-Amerika and French liners about the 20th of the month in time to be tuned up for the international race on August 1.

For the defense of the cup E. J. Schroeder has built the Pirate II. He won the race last year with Pirate I., and will enter both in the trials. The Pirate I has a 132 horsepower eight cylinder Simplex motor, and the Pirate II. has one eight cylinder diagonal opposed motor of about 200 horsepower, which has been built by Crane & Whitman. C. H. Crane designed this hull. This boat is to be ready just before the trials. Edwin S. Webster has entered the Autovia II., and she will represent the Eastern Yacht Club. She is equipped with two eight cylinder motors of 200 horsepower each.

Frank Chipperfield Bay will come the Chip III. This boat will surely be a good one. She has two 4-cylinder 150 horsepower motor and the Simplex III., owned by W. W. Whitehead, is equipped with a 500 horsepower Simplex motor.

The only restriction is that the boats must not exceed forty feet overall length, and they can have all the power they can carry. The Wolseley-Siddeley has motors of 460 horsepower.

The races are around a triangular course about fifteen miles in length, and the condition say that the course must be between thirty and thirty-five miles.

FINAL MATINEE AT SPEEDWAY TO-MORROW

For the final matinee in the Spring series of the Metropolitan Driving Club at Charles River speedway to-morrow, the entry is the lightest this season, but of the dozen races scheduled the quality of the horses and the dexterity in closely matching them insures some great racing for the winding.

The most interest will be directed on the trotting class in which Dodie K. will be pitted Lord Quet, Captain Axtelloid, Dodie K. and Chase, while the two rivals, Claymos and Phoebon W., will again go horse in the pacing class. The entries:

BUFFALO MEET IS MATTER OF GRAVE DOUBT

Since the passage of the anti-betting laws in New York horsemen have been awaiting with interest some announcement from the Buffalo Association that controls the Grand Circuit racing there as to whether a meeting would be held on the schedled dates.

Rumors have been going about that the meeting will be declared off, but no official action having as yet been given, it is still rumor. Naturally horsemen who expect to race in the Grand Circuit and who wish to arrange their route are a little puzzled for the announcement of the withdrawal of dates or a denial of the rumor to come.

New York State gave three Grand Circuit meetings last year, Buffalo, Syracuse and Syracuse. The latter two cities have declared positively that the passage of the law that has put an end to betting in the Empire State will have not the least effect on their meetings, that what everything advertised will stand, but the Buffalo people have been strangely silent.

The rumor goes on to say that the Windsor, Ont., track will be used for a meeting during the Buffalo dates. With Buffalo clear out, the Grand Circuit presents a strong appearance, as Kalamazoo will have a meeting that will equal or excel the Cleveland, and Long Branch, N. J., has taken the Providence dates. Buffalo would have to open the stakes opposite, no matter what is done with the balance of the program.

PACKY WILL GO AFTER BAT NELSON

In response to a telegram asking his opinion of Jeffries' draw decision in the McFarland-Welsh bout, and the future plans of Packy Harry Gerl, the manager for the Chicago lightweight, and speaking for him, wired the Hearst News Service as follows:

"Low Angeles, July 5.

"We are dissatisfied and frankly we're pleased with the decision of a draw from Referee Jim Jeffries. I want to say that McFarland was the winner beyond any question of doubt. I do not question Jeff's honesty, but any one of two things was the cause of his being mistaken: He is not capable of judging a winner or he lacks the conviction; and the later is what I attribute as the cause of his injustice to us.

"The Jeffries Club is eager to close an immediate engagement for Labor Day, but I have San Francisco in consideration and will leave for there on Wednesday. Immediately upon my arrival in Frisco I will post a forfeit and side bet of $2,000 to meet Battling Nelson."

MURPHY GETS RID OF BANNER

Chicago, July 6.—President Murphy has lived up to his threat and disposed of the yellow world's championship pennant. Fans at the West Side ball park yesterday saw at the matshead the red-trimmed league pennant instead of the big flag with yellow fringe and gold lettering that was given the club by the National Commission.

The reason this was the world's championship pennant under present rules has ever duplicated. The commission presented the New York Giants and the White Sox with flags similar to the one given the Cubs. Both the Giants and the White Sox fell down that same season, failing to win even their league championship.

When Buck began to break matches the Cubs just as they were starting East, President Murphy declared that he would burn that yellow pennant, for he believed it a hoodoo for the world's champions. The flag is gone, the red-trimmed blue banner of the league is in its place.

PLAY 19 INNINGS WITHOUT A RUN

NEWARK, July 6.—One of the most remarkable games ever played here was that yesterday between the local and Jersey City teams, the latter winning, nothing to nothing, darkness being the cause of the game's end. Every great work was done by both pitchers, the visiting twirler, Brockett, having the better of it. While Brockett gave three bases on balls and struck out eight, Ellis pitcher fanned fourteen. Ladrie gave two bases on balls and hit two men, while Brockett gave three bases on balls.

BOSTON TEAM WON PENNANT WITHOUT SIGNS

Pitcher Jesse Tannehill, traded by Boston to Washington recently, the other day revealed the fact that the Boston team, under Jimmy Collins, won two pennants, and they never had any signs. Of course, the catcher signaled the pitcher, but there was no alt-and-run sign nor anything else.

"If the man on first stole, the batter tried to help him out, but there was no sign for the play, and yet the team played ball. I was with New York and I do not know that we spent a whole lot of time trying to get the batting signs. To my mind the surprise I learned after joining the Boston team that they did not have any.

"Jimmy Collins is no believer in them, and I guess he's right. There are now many teams here because of the pitching signs that are won by them. The most successful team, by nothing, is the one which has the fewest signs. Signs bother the average player, and he is so anxious about the signals that he forgets everything else, with the result that he does not hit when he would if not hampered by signals."

SPLENDID RUN FOR YACHTS.

PORTLAND, Me., July 6.—A lively spinnaker match of thirty-eight miles before an always increasing southwester gave the Eastern Yacht Club fleet a splendid run yesterday from the Isles of Shoals to this port. Every yacht had plenty of canvas to show her paces in the contest for the "Brown Hill" race and luffing contests were few. The honors were won by the sloops Emerald and Venona and the sloops Avenger, Dorello and Glorlana.

SCOTS TO HAVE BIG MAT BOUT

The games committee of the Boston Caledonian Club at a special meeting was authorized to arrange a wrestling match for one of the added features for the Scotch picnic which takes place August 15 at Nantasket Beach. Negotiations were opened with several first-class men and the best possible outcome will be secured. Wrestling proved to be one of the most entertaining features furnished in past years and the universal desire of the members and their friends to have this sport has been met by the action of the committee in charge.

It was at first proposed to try to secure Frank Gotch, but the latter is on his farm at Humboldt, Ia., for the rest of the summer, and will not compete in the East.

LABOR NEWS

UNION PRINTING TRADES COUNCIL BOSTON, MASS. 96

Boston Central Labor Union has instructed Secretary Henry Abrahams to communicate with the secretaries of all its affiliated unions asking them to instruct their delegates to the C. L. U. as to whether they desire to take part in or give a Labor Day parade. Returns must be made before August 2, so that the matter can be decided on that date.

An invitation from Rev. A. A. Stockdale to attend a service in the Union Congregational Church the Sunday before Labor Day was accepted.

The following resolution was passed:

"It is peculiar statesmanship that decries the number of employes of a city, state or nation at time of depression, and is only equalled in the city of Boston by the balance sheet of his honor, the mayor, showing a decrease in the expenses and an increase in expenses; out of those peculiar situations does the luxury citizen cannot solve."

A resolution in favor of woman suffrage was adopted.

Financial dissatisfaction at the result of the mass protest meeting in Faneuil Hall last week was expressed, and a resolution passed calling upon members of organized labor to carry themselves to have every political candidate sign a pledge to the effect that he will introduce, and aid advocate a national eight hour law.

LABOR NOTES.

The Cohen-Driscoll fund is now closed. The donations amounted to $6,850.50.

Painters' District Council, No. 25, yesterday elected the following officers: President, Frank F. Hurley; vice president, Thomas Sweeney; financial secretary, George L. Bowen; recording secretary, Thomas J. Logan of Brighton No. 769; sergeant-at-arms, George Lyons of Roxbury No. 937; trustee, James Walsh of East Boston No. 602. Delegates to the Building Trades Council will be chosen shortly. It was announced that the Painters' Union Labor Day picnic will be held at Norumbega Park. Other unions and the Building Trades Council will hold picnics on July 10-20 at the same place. Meetings are held on first and third Sundays of each month. An outing down the harbor will take place July 26.

Get Out in the Country—Look at Real Estate

Combine the Search for Fresh Air With Plans for Profit.

Copyright, 1908, by American-Journal-Examiner

The noisy city, dusty streets, hot pavements — escape from them whenever you can. When you get a day, a Saturday half-holiday, or even on a Sunday, take your wife and the children and go out into the country — anywhere within reasonable distance of the big city. Take along your luncheon in a basket, buy some fruit for the children at the other end of your journey, get out under a green tree, look at the sun through the leaves and the clouds drifting along, and make your wife and young children realize that the home of man is the beautiful country; that he sprang from the fertile earth, not from the hideous stone and brick and smoke and noise of the city.

And while you are in the country, Mr. Father of the Family, bear in mind the many things that this newspaper has said to you about buying real estate. If you can go to the country and at the same time examine opportunities for real estate purchase, DO THAT. We feel more strongly than ever the value of the advice that we have given to our readers in regard to the WISE purchase of real estate. We want them especially to understand that the opportunities are not exhausted; on the contrary, THEY ARE BARELY REALIZED even by those that have studied the question most thoroughly.

If you buy with any judgment at all, it is almost impossible to make a mistake within reasonable distance of this great city.

You ought to try to BUY FOR A HOME. You ought to try to BUY WHERE YOU CAN LIVE NOW. And when we say now, we mean NOW. Don't be afraid of a mile walk to the station. And don't be afraid of the extra minutes going and coming on the train. Those minutes need not be wasted FOR A MAN WHO KNOWS HOW TO THINK, and a mile walk in the country is the most sensible thing that a man can enforce upon himself.

Remember that the development of transportation, which is now under way, IS NOT ONE-HALF APPRECIATED.

There has been somewhat of a real estate boom on account of subways and the new Elevated, BUT IT IS NOT REALLY BEGUN.

You see the real value of property is only developed AFTER THE PEOPLE ARE ACTUALLY THERE AND WANT IT. And, while many people talk of the future city spreading all around the present city, few can realize it.

We want our readers to buy land, to live in the country now with their children, to have a comfortable home for many years at a very moderate rental, and thank this newspaper ultimately for a great profit on a wise investment.

Many, of course, will make mistakes, and that we shall regret. Many will listen to false statements by over-enthusiastic real estate sellers. That is inevitable.

Remember this, however: Ten years from now, undoubtedly, some of our readers will regret purchases that they have made. But among those that have any common sense at all there will be an infinitely greater number whose purchases the real estate sellers would gladly take back at an enormous advance.

You hear a good deal about the investor who regrets his purchase. But you don't hear so much about the real estate seller—and he is very numerous—who sold for a trifle a property worth a fortune.

Buy a good-sized piece of ground if you can; enough for yourself and a neighbor. As soon as you get your piece of ground, if it has no trees, plant a few and let them start growing while you are building. You can build cheaply now; materials have decreased in cost.

Be reasonable; don't go beyond your means; don't undertake to pay more than you can pay, BUT BUY REAL ESTATE.

THE LITTLEST WOMAN IN THE WORLD

A Queer Subject for a Magazine Article

(Reproduced from the Cosmopolitan Magazine by permission.)

The smallest woman in the world—probably—is a young colored lady eighteen years old, named Princess Weenie Wee in the circus, and in real life named Harriet Elizabeth Thompson. This young American lady is the subject of an article in the August Cosmopolitan Magazine, written by A. Brisbane. The picture which is reproduced here, taken from the Cosmopolitan Magazine, is a reproduction of a photograph showing the world's smallest woman standing beside the step of a Fourth avenue street car in New York City. Concerning the smallest living adult human being, the Cosmopolitan Magazine says, in part:

PRINCESS WEENIE WEE

You would like to know something in detail about these pictures. One shows the smallest living woman standing at the step of a Fourth avenue street car in New York City. It is one of the "pay as you enter" kind of cars planned to prevent the conductor stealing, to leave all stealings to the trust that owns the street and street cars. That photograph, taken expressly for this article, as were the others, tells its own story of littleness. It emphasizes, for the benefit of young reporters and others that want to write, the importance of well-chosen contrast or comparison.

Take away the street car, the huge conductor, the big lady on the left (she is the midget's sister), and little "Weenie" would look like an ordinary woman. For all you could know she might be Mrs. Astor going downtown to buy another hat, or uptown to revise the "society list." Don't fail to have a contrast in your photograph or in your sentence — nothing else makes a picture.

The Diary of a Camper

By Wex Jones

NO more of the city's heat and dust. Me for the sandy beach and the rolling ocean; the sky my roof and the clean sand my bed. Plenty of fresh air and salt water.

* * *

Picked out an ideal spot on the beach. Long stretch of fine sand; water at high tide lapping up to door of tent. Can't understand why every one doesn't live in a tent and get close to Nature's heart.

* * *

Got the tent pitched to-day. Looks simple, but it's quite a job in reality. Back feels broken and shoulders sore. But it's fine to run around in a bathing suit. Can't understand why every one doesn't wear a bathing suit. Would be nice and cool on Tremont street.

* * *

Morning.—Large blisters all over shoulders, arms, back and legs. Never thought sun could be so strong. When I move a hand or foot a square yard of skin seems to crack in twenty places.

Evening.—Been lying on cot all day wrapped in a suit of vaseline. Cot most uncomfortable thing to lie on. Seems to have been designed to do away with alarm clocks, for five minutes after lying down on it I am wishing it was time to get up again.

* * *

Got up this morning and was just saying to Smith, "Isn't this fine—sunrise on the water? I wonder how any one can live in a stuffy house," when some one jabbed a red-hot darning needle into my leg. Picked up a knife and turned around. No one there.

"Only a horsefly," said Smith.

"Only," I hissed (just like the villain in the novel).

Can't understand it. If a horsefly, why not stick to horses?

One advantage of camp was absence of mosquitoes. Mosquito's bite feels like the caress of a baby's pink fingers compared with red-hot skewer-throat employed by so-called horsefly.

This is Nature getting too close to me.

* * *

Funny how everything in a camp seems to bite. Ants, flies, mosquitoes, and even in the water the crabs seem to regard toes as a sort of bonbon to be crunched at one go. There are none of these things in town.

* * *

Camp life great for the appetite.

Breakfast in town: 1 sip of coffee, 1 bite at toast, 1 quick glance at bacon.

Breakfast in camp will be beefsteak, chops, potatoes, pie, ale, beans—everything solid.

* * *

Got up this morning hungry as a hunter. Smith was cook. He put what looked like a section of brownstone on the table. "What's this?" I asked. "Steak," he replied. "It slipped off the pan when I picked it up and fell in the sand, but I guess it's all right." Ever eat sanded steak? Well, never do, unless you're a friend of some struggling young dentist.

Sugar was all sand, except the ants.

Coffee was all sand.

Bread was sand.

Butter was solid sand. Science note: A pound of butter can absorb five gallons of sand.

Compromised on dish of breakfast food. Couldn't tell whether that was sand or not. Never noticed any sand in our flat.

The Family's Black Sheep

By James J. Montague

BILL'S in the penitentiary; his work is hard, but still
He keeps right at it steady so we're pretty proud o' Bill.

They hanged poor Abner Friday, but we took a lot o' pride
In that there breakfast that he ate the morning that he died.

Tom's in the Legislature, but we're hoping that he can Reform before it gets too late, and be a better man.

But Jim—his name ain't never said around our house no more;
We think o 'him o' nights sometimes, with heavy hearts and sore.

We tried to do our best by him, but somehow we just knew
That fate had marked him out for things men hadn't ought to do.

Jim's windin' up would put an end to all our earthly joys,
Except we had some comfort in the balance of our boys.

But Jim—there ain't no worse than him in these United States;
He's one of these here bum Vice-Presidential candidates!!
